LOUISVILLE, KY.

TUESDAY MORNING JULY 2.

For State Treasurer,
GOBRIAS TERRY, of Todd.

The Hopes, Wishes, and Dangers of Kentucky.

The people of Kentucky are liberty-loving constitution-revering, and law-abiding men.

They know that to establish and perpetuate the right of the people to govern themselves, the men of 1776 declared the independence of the Colonies, and took up arms against the most powerful nation on the earth, and fought the war of the Revolution. The Federal Constitution was adopted, the Federal Government was made the agent of the States, and a confederation of sovereign communities was formed which it was fondly hoped would be perpetuated forever by the good faith and loyalty of the parties to the agreement.

The people of Kentucky have lived in good faith by the Constitution. They have religiously respected the rights, and stained from interfering with the privileges, of other States or of the people of other States. They did all that could be done by them to preserve the Union.

But other States, and the people of other States, proved recreant to their obligations, broke the compact, and injured, injured and wronged our people and our State.

The injuries inflicted upon the South, and the wrongs suffered by them, were set forth in the resolutions adopted by the Union State Conventions in this city on the 8th of January last as resulting from the "bad fellowship" and "broken faith" of the "citizens of the Free States and the States themselves, and all men in the South believed, and all men then universally agreed, that we had "gracious to complain" of the North, that we should be preserved on the Union as long as it could be preserved on a "constitutional basis."

That the South could not be friendly with the North until peace was done, that the scholars set up by the "Black Republican party were "palpably unconstitutional," and would "not be submitted to by a free people jealous of their rights."

The following resolutions show the grounds taken by the "Union" men of Kentucky at the beginning of the present year, formally proclaimed by them in their State Conventions assembled:

Resolved, That although we of the Slave States and especially of Kentucky, have great reason to complain of bad fellowship and of broken faith, we do nevertheless propose by some of the citizens of the Free States, and the States themselves, who have broken faith with us and gone astray from the principles of civilization life or the rules of honorable warfare, these forces, as they pass through the country, must rob, destroy, and murder the people at their pleasure, seizing upon whomsoever they see proper, compelling lifelong citizens to take a scathful oath of allegiance to the Administration under the penalty of imprisonment or death, appropriating property to their own use, putting arms into the hands of all who are base enough to receive them and promise to use them against their neighbors, and leaving the country behind them a desolation and a waste.

In Syracuse, the house of Dr. Moon, formerly of this city, an exceedingly quiet and simple gentleman, was twice searched; and when he afterwards represented the fact to the commander of the forces and asked to be exempt from future annoyances to his home and his family, congratulating himself that no further judgments were to be uttered against him. But because he was well and favorably known to all persons in the city, as well as to the justice we demand, and without whom we cannot be friends, we still proclaim our opposition in favor of the Union, and hope of preserving it on the basis of the Constitution, we will maintain and defend it.

Resolved, That all laws of the free States which nullify and impair the full and fair operation of the Fugitive Slave Law are in conflict with the National Constitution, and we demand their repeal at the earliest practical moment.

* * *

Resolved, That if this anti-slavery party should not be able to hold together, and to stand on its principles in the use of the Federal Government, the South has ample means of resistance, and is fully able at any time to resist such unusual aggressions, and that, therefore, no need to edict this last resort.

Resolved, That the claim set up by a majority of the Free States to all the territory of the South, from the occupancy of any of it with her institutions, are palpably unjust and unconstitutional, and will not be edict-ed by a free people jealous of their rights.

Within the last six months, then, our people have been so far united as to believe and assert, that the South had been wronged by the people and the States of the North— that the South had "bad fellowship" and "broken faith" with the South, from the occupancy of any of it with her institutions, are palpably unjust

Major General Polk.
The Richmond (Va.) Enquirer, of Thursday last has the following in reference to the recent military appointment of Bishop Polk:

We have been highly gratified to learn that Bishop Polk, of Louisiana, after the most mature deliberation has consented to accept the command of the Confederate States of America. This indicates that when once the intentions of the Administration are made apparent and the danger with which they are threatened is exposed, he declined the appointment, and devoted himself to the service of the Church, in which service his career is well known.
He will be greatly missed by his countrymen, but his talents and character will be still more brilliant in the great and glorious cause in which the impulses of his own heart, as well as the solicitude of his friends, will induce him to remain.

This decision of Bishop Polk, in the interests of the country, is but little known to many, was a distinguished graduate of West Point in the palmy days of the War of 1812, and a member of the 4th Regiment of Artillery. It was the policy of President Davis, and Generals Lee, Huger, the two Jolietts, and Magruder, to have him appointed to a general position, but he turned his back on them, and the traitors who would have reduced them to bondage.

The people of the State were attached to the Union. They loved more or less all parts of the Confederacy. The blood of their fathers was as freely shed at Fort McMains, and the Thames, and the Raisin and Tippecanoe, as at New Orleans, or Buena Vista, or Corro Gordo, and their bones yet repose amid the snowdrifts of the North and on the plains of the South.

They clung to the Union with a desperate hope that defied reason. They hugged to their bosoms the idea that the Confederacy would be eternally weak while Aboli-tionists were single-handed to ruin it. And they did.

They wanted peace, too. They could not bear the idea of taking up arms against men whose fathers their fathers had protected from the savage foe. They could not fight against the gallant men of Mississippi and South Carolina whose brothers had slept the sleep of death with their brothers on a hundred fields of battle.

They wanted peace. They hoped for peace.
They prayed for peace. They have acted to maintain peace. They have refused to respond to the demand for troops to fight for the destruction of the Government.

With these views, and hopes, and to these ends, they voted on the 4th of May and on the 5th of June.

They believed it possible that good might come of the border slave State conference.

They had not disengaged that quasi-friend of the Administration, reflecting their wishes in demanding peace, would be held with attention in Congress and their propositions be favorably considered by that body.

But the Administration and its allies have chosen to interpret these demonstra-

ASSEMBLY.—The Federal Administration is pressing its measures intended to reduce to Kosciusko to the position in which Missouri is placed, and as a portion of our fellow-citizens are so lost to interest, honor, duty, and patriotism as to aid and assist in car-light upon the operations of "the enemies of the country" in our sister State, which may be peculiarly interesting to those who have been cured of the "bad fellowship" of the free states.
